

Seeking Truth. Giving Hope. Freeing the Innocent.

ALL ABOUT US

- The Pennsylvania Innocence Project is housed at Temple University Beasley School of Law and is a non-profit corporation organized to exonerate those convicted of crimes they did not commit.
- With a three-person legal staff and one investigator, the Project works with volunteer law students and attorneys to identify, investigate, and litigate claims of innocence from Pennsylvania inmates.

OUR CASES

- In 2013, our clients Lance Felder and Eugene Gilyard were released after serving 15 years each for a murder neither man committed. This past year, both Greg Brown and Letitia Smallwood won new trials and the chance to prove their innocence after serving 17 and 42 years in prison, respectively, for a situation where no crime was committed.
- After years of case development, the Project has 22 cases in litigation throughout the Commonwealth, and we are actively investigating several more. We have identified two true perpetrators.
- Combined, these clients have so far served 415 years in prison.

MAKING A DIFFERENCE

- Working with all stakeholders in the criminal justice system, the Pennsylvania Innocence Project works to develop policy reforms aimed at the primary causes of wrongful convictions including eyewitness misidentifications, false confessions, and misuse of government informants.
- Working directly with law enforcement agencies, the Project encourages training in and adoption of known best practices aimed at preventing wrongful arrests and securing accurate and reliable evidence: blindly administered, sequentially presented, eyewitness identification procedures and recording of suspect interrogations from start to finish.
